March Commentary

The Trust produced a Net Asset Value total return of -0.7% during the month and a price total return of -0.9%, compared to a return of -2.2% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR).

The S&P 500 was down -6% in dollars last month¹, as nervousness over tariffs and their implications for growth and inflation intensified. At the time of writing, markets are trying to parse the implications from 'Liberation Day' and the US's announcement of decades-high levels of tariffs on the rest of the world. The euphoria which pervaded stock markets following Trump's electoral win has firmly receded. Hopes for tax cuts and deregulation have been superseded by growing fears about the economic fall-out from this unprecedented shift in the global terms of trade. The range of possible outcomes remains wide.

As concerns economic growth, uncertainty acts as a break on decision-making. Business leaders unsure of what customer demand or input costs will look like in a year's time are likely to defer major investment. Survey data show that this sort of paralysis is seeping into both hiring and capital expenditure. Free trade has been an important driver of growth and efficiency around the world, but it has also been attended by greater inequality. It is this latter consequence in the US, where domestic manufacturing specifically has waned, that has enabled Trump to capture the mind of the rust belt voter.

That voter may be disappointed by their President's solution. Projections are sensitive to currency movements, but it is likely that tariffs do little to help with the cost of living. Meanwhile, restarting domestic production will not occur at the flick of a switch. A confluence of lower growth and higher inflation points towards the risk of a 'stagflationary' economy. Such an environment, last seen in earnest in the 1970s, is potentially challenging for stocks on high valuations. We will continue to monitor the risks and be guided by the valuations on offer in the asset classes we favour. Over a third of the portfolio is currently invested in index-linked bonds that should benefit if stagflation appears.

Important Information

Please refer to Troy's Glossary of Investment terms here. Performance data relating to the NAV is calculated net of fees with income reinvested unless stated otherwise. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. Overseas investments may be affected by movements in currency exchange rates. The value of an investment and any income from it may fall as well as rise and investors may get back less than they invested. The historic yield reflects distributions declared over the past twelve months as a percentage of the Trust's price, as at the date shown. It does not include any preliminary charge and investors may be subject to tax on their distributions. Tax legislation and the levels of relief from taxation can change at any time. The yield is not guaranteed and will fluctuate. There is no guarantee that the objective of the investments will be met. Shares in an Investment Trust are listed on the London Stock Exchange and their price is affected by supply and demand. This means that the share price may be different from the NAV. Information on the risks of an investment in the fund can be found in the Prospectus.
